

Fauna of China is a publishing initiative aimed at providing English descriptions of the diverse fauna of China. It is intended to serve as a gateway to information that is previously available mostly in Chinese.

Two book series are published.

Fauna of China is a series of books, each including a monograph or a collection of research papers on the diverse fauna of China. Each book is a hardcover volume of ca 200 pages and is issued whenever manuscripts are ready for publication.

The sister publication, Fauna of China Synopsis, is a series of booklets each containing a faunistic survey or summary in English of a taxon (family, order etc.) known from China. Each booklet includes a list of all species of that taxon in China.

These publications are essential references for any library that supports research in biodiversity, conservation, systematics, ecology, evolution, phylogeny, zoology, parasitology, behavior, natural resources research and policy-making, environmental protection and management.
